the sweetness and softness of a European in his countenance too, especially when he smiled. His hair was long and black, not curly like wool; his forehead very high and large, and a great vivacity and sparkling sharpness In his eyes. The colour of his skin was not quite black, but very tawny, and yet not of an ugly yellow tawny, as the Brazilians and Virginians, and other natives of America are, but of a bright kind of a dun olive colour,, that had in It something very agreeable,, though not very easy to describe. His face was round and plump, Ms nose small, not flat like the negroes, a very good mouth, thin lips, and his teeth fine, well set, and white as Ivory.
